The Batavia Enterprises Family Welcomes the ArgusBCS Family to Their New Home

Batavia Enterprises, Inc. (BEI), a locally owned property management and development firm, welcomes Jerry and Matt Sidman and the ArgusBCS family to their newly renovated suite on Flinn Street.

Father-son duo Jerry and Matt Sidman started ArgusBCS in 2002 because they believed that local companies needed a way to take advantage of services they had been providing to Fortune 200 companies for over 40 years without having to hire full time resources. Their extensive experiences in IT planning, project management and support allowed them to develop a model that provides their clients with the same technical capabilities that large firms enjoy, at a fraction of the cost.

Not only does this father-son team run the business, but their passion for the industry has spread to the rest of the family. Originally they planned to add staff as they grew, but once interest to participate grew in the family, they realized the value they could provide their clients as well as the company and continued to create a true family business. Their concept of family business worked well with Batavia Enterprises, with whom they've had a working relationship for over five years. Previously located in the old Shelby Elementary School building, owned and managed by Batavia Enterprises, Matt Sidman began working with Austin Dempsey once they realized their need for expansion and a more suitable atmosphere for their technology. Matt, Austin, and Vasilion Architects then went to work to design and create an office environment for ArgusBCS that would not only meet their technological needs, but preserve the history of the building. What was once an old warehouse space for World War II ammunition, transformed into an impressive office suite capable of housing the intricate technology of the 21st century while keeping the historic familiarity of the space. The Sidmans even noticed that more clients have come to visit them than ever before, having been equally impressed with the new office. Previously located in both Geneva and St. Charles, ArgusBCS has been involved in both chambers and is looking forward to joining the Batavia Chamber as well as participating in local service groups. For more information on ArgusBCS, feel free to visit their website, www.argusbcs.com, or call Nancy Sidman at 630-482-2227.

Batavia Enterprises is proud to have such a dedicated company as a tenant and hopes to continue this working relationship for years to come. To learn more about what Batavia Enterprises, Inc. has to offer, please visit us at www.bataviaenterprises.com or call Julie Kotalik at 630-879-3680.
