VNA of Fox Valley has changed its name to VNA Health Care, effective immediately.

“We are excited to share this announcement with the communities we serve,” says Linnea Windel, President and CEO of VNA. “We believe the name VNA Health Care allows us to better represent the range of services we offer today and yet reflects our historical roots.”

Since 1918, VNA has set the gold standard for health care providers. Currently, the organization provides health care to more than 50,000 patients across all service areas. VNA provides primary health care through VNA Health Centers, located in Aurora and Elgin. Exceptional, comprehensive nursing-based care is provided through VNA Home Care, VNA Hospice and VNA Housecalls.

“Under the name VNA of Fox Valley, the organization has built a solid reputation in the communities we serve,” says Byron Saum, Chairman of the Board. “As VNA Health Care, we’ll continue to provide compassionate, quality care through our Health Centers and home visiting programs. The name change allows us to better position our organization to reflect what we do for the many different types of patients we serve.”

VNA Health Care continues to operate as a not-for-profit, 501-3c organization. The organizational structure, staff, and services have not changed.

“While this change reflects the fact that VNA is poised for growth and expansion in the future, our organizational values have not and will not change,” Windel states. “We remain committed to providing the highest level of quality care to all of our patients.”
