

Fox Valley Auto Group

The mission of the Fox Valley Auto Group is to move people, whether it is financially, spiritually, emotionally, as well as professionally. With two dealerships in St. Charles -- Volkswagen and Buick GMC -- as well as another Volkswagen dealership in Schaumburg, the group employs approximately 160 employees and sells about 5,000 vehicles and services over 54,000 vehicles annually.

“We want to move people to a better place in their lives just by dealing and working with us,” said founder, President and CEO Emir Abinon, a resident of St. Charles for more than 20 years.

One of the company’s goals is to give back to the community whenever possible. The Auto Group dealership frequently supports local charity, including: Lazarus House, Fox Valley Christian Action, Northern Illinois Food Bank, Salvation Army St. Charles, Chicago Homeless Coalition, Cal’s Angels, Generation Rescue, and Habitat For Humanity Fox Valley.

Recently, Abinon accepted the Better Business Bureau’s 2018 Torch Award for Marketplace Ethics. The Auto Group was selected from hundreds of nominations. Being a recipient of this award indicates that a company demonstrates leadership, responsibility, and high standards of ethics to benefit their customers, employees, and community. Fox Valley Auto Group is just the second automobile dealership to ever receive the Torch Award.

The two things that drive Abinon are finding ways to make it better and more convenient for the dealerships’ customers to do business with them, and how can they serve the community better.

“This comes first before any vehicle is sold or serviced,” he said.
